Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

1. Claims 1-5,7-13,15-18 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being clearly anticipated by Herz (6407779).

Herz shows a video display device 220 that transmits database information to a remote controller 210 to program or modify the control database 216 in the remote controller. See col. 5 lines 54+. The video display device receives the programming information from a central station using the VBI portion of the video signal from the central station. See col. 14 line 40 to col. 15 line 34. The video display device stores the information it receives from the central station in the memory 224, prior to sending the information to the remote controller. See col. 3 lines 15+. Herz includes a user initiation option so the user can initiate the programming of the remote controller. See col. 14 line 55. Herz shows that the programming signals can be stored on a video tap and processed by a video player. See col. 15 lines 14+. The remote controller, once reprogrammed, can be used to operate entertainment component. See col. 15 lines 25+.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 6 and 14 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Herz as applied to claims 1 and 14 above, and further in view of Allport (6097441).

In an analogous art, Allport shows the use of a bi-directional communication link between a television and a remote controller. Allport teaches that USB or Firewire 1394 are equivalent alternatives to IR for such a bi-directional link. See col. 10 lines 9+.

Therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to have used USB or Firewire as the communication link between the television and the remote controller of Herz, because Allport teaches that these are known equivalent alternatives for such links.
